

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

GREETING.

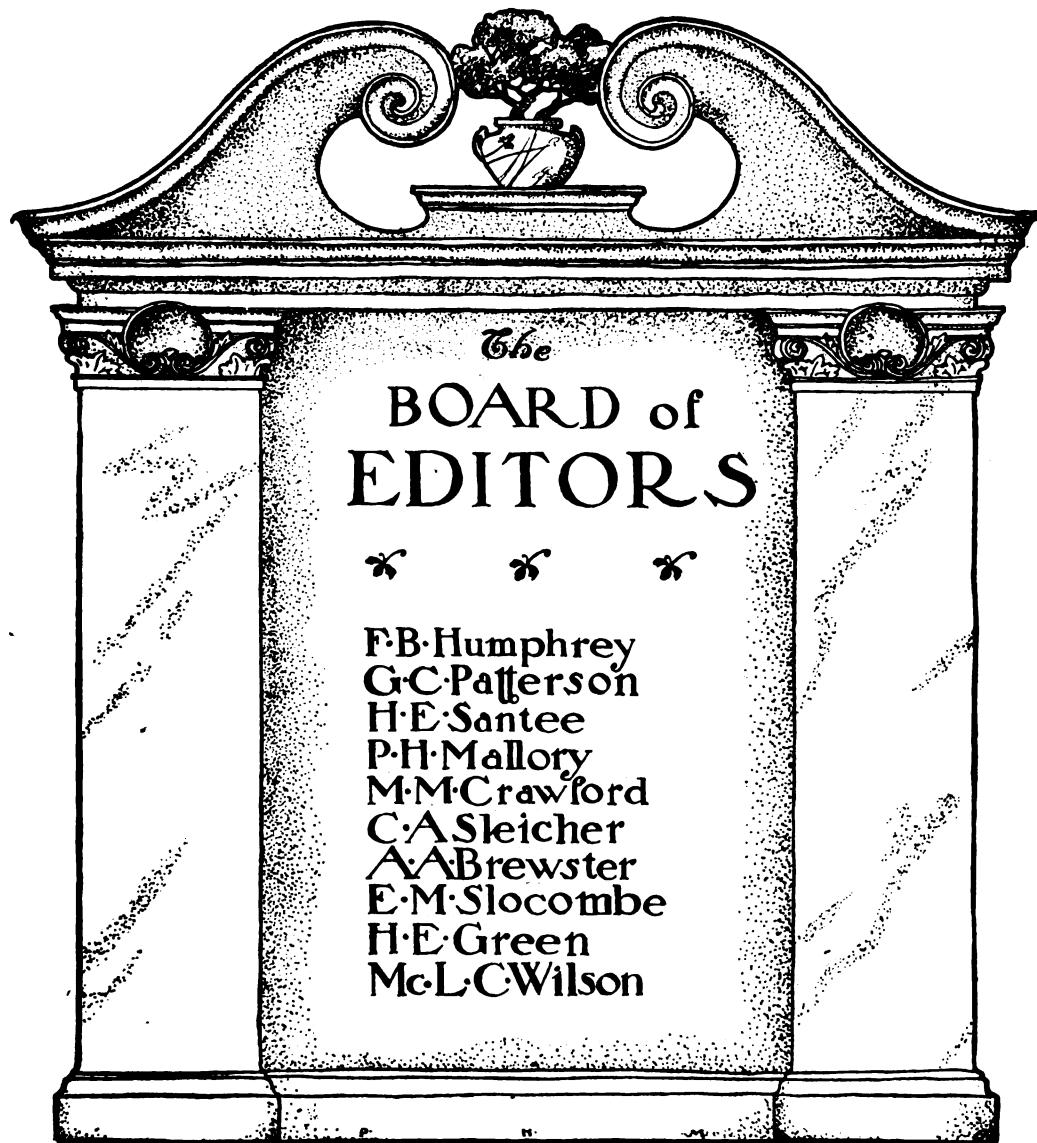

To all men Everywhere,
Who have ever known
Or shall ever know,

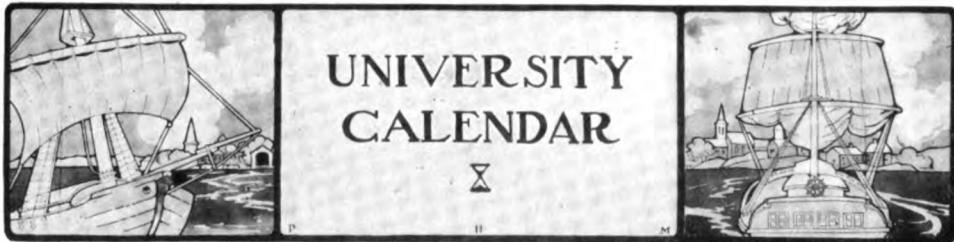

The love we bear for Alma Mater,
The Junior Class, in Her name,
Presents this Book.

Herein recorded, Y^e shall find
A chapter from our College Life,
The records of a single year
In Classroom, on the Field of sport,
Or on the Water. And these
Be a strange Medley
Of triumphs and defeats;
But Y^e that know us best
Shall find herein a something more -
A something that remains unchanged
Through triumph or defeat.

And this, the SPIRIT of CORNELL,
Alone we seek and reverence.

Jeremiah Whipple Jenks

HE modern University has produced a new type of teacher. The old-time American college, with its life sheltered from contact with the world of action, nurtured many noble characters, but it was a prison to most students with virile and practical temperament. The combination of scientific ardor with a capacity for practical affairs has long been possible in professors of the political sciences in German Universities; only of late in America has the academic career been made congenial to men of that stamp. A generation ago, at the very period of Cornell's foundation, the universities began to reflect all phases of the worthy thought and aspiration of the living world. The talents and common-sense that we love to think of as peculiarly American, are no longer repelled from the halls of philosophy. The new type of scholar and teacher, in turn, is transforming American higher education. This, in brief, is the logic of the presence in University life today of Jeremiah Whipple Jenks.

¶ Born in St. Clair, Michigan, he graduated from the University of that state as A.B. in 1878, and as A.M. in 1879. The pursuit of business, the study of law, followed by admission to the Michigan bar, and teaching in a small college, occupied him for a few years; but another work more and more was attracting him. After two years of resident study in Germany, he obtained, in 1885, the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in political sciences at the University of Halle.

¶ He had to await an opening in his chosen work. Some years of teaching in subjects not closely related to his special interests, preceded the development at Knox College of a field for his social studies. Between 1889 and 1891, at Indiana University, his name as a teacher of economics and politics was made, and at the end of that period he had to choose among several calls to larger universities.

¶ The then newly established chair of Political and Social Institutions in Cornell University gave him the opportunity to develop more fully the ideal of study and teaching that had inspired him for years. In his own words: "Students of economics must be made to feel and to know that the principles of economics are really a statement of the principles upon which actual business is done, and that it is of prime importance that they come into immediate contact with business conditions and business men. We can not understand economics unless we hold close to the actual facts of business life." And of the study of politics he said: "It should be kept close to the conditions of the world of real things. The student should see what the motives are that are influencing the voter, and what the forces are that are shaping the affairs of state."

¶ The courses now given by him represent the three lines of study which, as a professor in Cornell, he has consistently pursued during the past twelve years. The course on "Modern Questions in International Politics," varying from year to year in accordance with current events, fittingly becomes at this time a study of colonial government. Fresh from a visit to the Orient he seeks the lessons of experience for the guidance of our own eastern dependencies. In "The Principles of Politics" are traced the growth of political philosophy and that of political societies. The course in "Economic Legislation," perhaps the most characteristic one he gives, stood unique in University curricula until imitated by his own students in their teaching. In it are taken up the economic issues that are of immediate interest in the state and nation, and in the light of the widest experience and in view of the existing difficulties, students are trained to frame bills that deal with the questions in a practical way.

¶ This group of courses is but the development of the thought with which he began his teaching. That, taken together, they are without a close parallel in any other university, is due to the exceptional requirements they make of the teacher. No other man today teaching political science in an American university has had such close and continued contact with the world of practical affairs. A few facts will indicate the nature and range of the preparation he has had outside of books and classrooms. His training in economics ("the best I ever had," says he) began with the three years spent in actual business before he studied the subject in college at all. With the study of law began his familiarity with the work of state legislatures, his knowledge of the methods of practical politics, and his wide acquaintance with men in American public life. Of the four years he has spent in foreign lands, two have been given entirely to a first-hand study, under exceptionally favorable conditions, of men, institutions and legislation in Europe and Asia. His counsels have influenced tax reforms in more than one of the American states. He has been continuously an active member of those national organizations that are working for the reform of city government and for the improvement of our industrial laws. Forecasting fifteen years ago the recent development of trusts, he made the first scientific study of that form of industrial organization as found in the Salt Trust of Michigan and in the Whiskey Trust of Illinois. At the request of Governor Roosevelt, he drafted the law on business corporations which was presented to the Legislature of New York in 1899. Called, on account of his unique fitness, to act for the United States Industrial Commission as Expert Agent on Trusts, his work during three years in that connection was an important factor in giving to the Commission's report a value theretofore unequalled among government investigations of economic problems. In that period, he again crossed the Atlantic, to gather material for a special report on the industrial combinations and the industrial laws of Europe. As Special Agent of the War Department, he spent the year 1901-02 in the Orient, preparing a report on the economic conditions of the various European colonies and of our own dependencies.

¶ Such a character and career strike a new note in the study and teaching of the political sciences in America. That this method of political study must contribute to the soundest scientific results will be believed by all those who think of political science not as a Utopian reverie, but as the clearest and deepest insight into the realities of social life. That this teaching makes for true education and for useful citizenship is evidenced by the lasting impression it leaves on the students, who carry out with them into business and the professions the lessons and convictions gained in this teacher's classroom. But they go out as disciples of the spirit, not as doctrinaires. This, in his words, is the aim: "The best service a teacher can do for his students is to encourage them to think for themselves; it is not to make them believe in doctrines, but to fit them to deal independently with new problems as they arise."

¶ With the students he never, in the smallest measure, has sought popularity; he has found it in the best sense and in the highest degree. They value him not alone for his intellectual lessons, but for his hearty optimism, his hatred of sham, his personal words of counsel, for the kindly twinkle of his eye, and for his faith in them. ¶ In all times, places and actions, simple, genuine and judicious, Jeremiah Whipple Jenks is admired as a seeker after truth, is beloved as a teacher, and is honored as a man.

E. A. Merton,

Estevan Antonio Fuertes

ESTEVAN ANTONIO FUERTES, for thirty years Director of the Department and the College of Civil Engineering, of Cornell University, died at Ithaca, N. Y., January 16th, after a long illness which, however, did not incapacitate him until within a short time. He had resigned his directorship and retained the Professorship of Astronomy and the charge of the newly constructed

A. C. Barnes Astronomical Observatory.

¶ Mr. Fuertes was born, May 10, 1838, in San Juan, Puerto Rico, of which province his father was for many years Governor. He was educated at the local university, San Ildefonso, taking the degree Ph.D., and then came to the United States to secure his professional training at the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. He returned to Puerto Rico and became connected with the Public Works Department, of which he was later made Director for the Western Division. In 1863, he was appointed Assistant Engineer, and later Engineer, of the Croton Aqueduct Board, serving until 1869, when the embarrassments of the Tweed period led to his resignation. In 1870-1, he was Chief Engineer of the Shufeldt U. S. Canal Exploring Expedition and made surveys of routes across Tehuantepec and Nicaragua. In 1871, he became a consulting engineer in New York city, from which occupation he was called to the directorship of the Department of Civil Engineering at Cornell University under the presidency of Andrew D. White.

¶ Under his supervision, that department grew rapidly and was finally erected into a College of Civil Engineering, of which he was appointed Director, and in which position he continued until recently retired.

¶ Dr. Fuertes had abandoned professional practice, although he occasionally accepted work of importance, as, for example, the construction, on the application of the Brazilian Government, of plans for the sanitary rehabilitation of the port of Santos, formerly seriously afflicted by yellow fever. This great work was completed in a remarkably short time, with the co-operation of Rudolph Hering and James H. Fuertes.

His greatest work was considered by him to be the organization and administration of his professional school, of which the curriculum was fundamentally scientific and which illustrated in a most perfect manner the modern evolution of civil engineering as a branch of applied science. Despite the severity of the course, the school steadily grew, and, for many years, its numbers have taxed seriously the continually growing space and equipment.

The fundamental principle in the establishment of the curriculum and in its administration was the employment of sound scientific method, the adoption of every device offered by modern science and the application of every advance in applied science, in all departments of engineering. Sound scholarship and exact method characterized every branch of the professional course. He was fully justified by the standing which the institution attained and maintained, not only with his profession, but among scientific men, and by the character of the professional work of the alumni of the college. He lived in and for his work and the greatest grief of his life was the necessity of dropping it rather than dropping out of it at the end.

Mr. Fuertes was a man of strong individuality, with many lovable traits. He was impulsive, sympathetic and warmhearted. He was social, very dependent upon his friends, an interesting raconteur, with a memory well stored with material, and his conversation was fruitful of information, rich in the accumulations of a varied experience.

Honored by his profession and his fellow-members in numerous scientific and technical associations, beloved by his pupils and his friends and associates, with a long record of great work accomplished, leaving behind him a monument of exceptional importance in the college of engineering which he worked a full generation to erect, with so long and rich a life permanently contributing to the advantage of his profession, of his adopted country, and the world, the retrospect is an enviable one and the regrets of his friends, thus losing him, are tempered by justifiable pride as they contemplate the record.

In Memoriam

OLL FOR THE FALLEN! Some of our best are no more. In the prime of manhood, like flowers of the field, they have been cut off and withered.

¶The hearts of fathers and mothers, of brothers and sisters, of friends and some dearer than friends, have been wrung with anguish. Their sorrow is our sorrow. Our friends are no more. Never again shall we grasp the warm hand or hear the living voice of those comrades we knew and loved.
Alas! Alas!

¶To all those whom the ties of kinship and affection united to our lost friends, this brotherhood of scholars, mourning a common loss, tenders deep and sincere sympathy, though, indeed, tears are nearer than words.

An Alumnus at Poughkeepsie

HE ALUMNUS WHO HAS FELT THE POUGHKEEPSIE IMPULSE COMING ON, YEAR AFTER YEAR, AS THE LAST DAYS OF JUNE DRAW NEARER, HAS PERHAPS NEVER FULLY REALIZED WHAT A SUDDEN AND PECULIAR CHANGE IT BRINGS WITH IT. Not a thought of Vassarville the whole year through, and suddenly no other town in the state; the friends in the hillside city by the river, neglected and seemingly forgotten, and all at once a thick interchange of missives of invitation and recollection and anticipation.

Assured of a seat with the Cornell crowd on the observation train, perhaps also with a return ticket to Ithaca in his pocket, he escapes at last from the tangle of Ithaca interests and hurries to follow his thoughts. Next morning he alights at the station which lies under Main Street, and is at once at home. The same clangling, buzzing cars climbing the same brick-paved hill, the same rainbow of colored flags before the same shops and hotels, the same boy on the same bunting-swathed bicycle, the same crowd of strangers at the general delivery window of the post-office, the same mob of self-appreciative youth lounging on the leather-covered sofas of the Nelson House lobby. A handshake with an '85 man from New York, with a '96 man who has dropped in from Chicago—here we are again, to be sure.

Up the street and around the corner, and he again feels the kindly hospitality of the generous family that has made him one of them so many times before. He gets into a suit of flannels and a straw hat, and then for the Quarters. He breathes a sigh of relief when he finds the seven-cent ferryboat awaiting him at the foot of the hill, for that means that he has saved an hour. The brief trip diagonally under the lofty bridge, a perspiring walk down the crunchy track and there they are. ¶ Here is Ithaca, Ulster County, New York. Here are our clean-limbed, clear-eyed, manly boys. They lounge under the trees, they read newspapers and letters on the verandas, they do anything in fact except to betray any shade of anxiety or apprehension. The alumnus has brought with him the eagerness and excitement that have been growing in him ever since he set his face eastward. He walks into a peaceful, orderly community of care-free loafers. He has come to see a desperate struggle of giants; a fever of enthusiasm burns in his veins. These boys are the giants, it is the eve of a great day; but there is no fever in the brown cheeks, there is no restlessness in a single one of these sprawling forms. They gaze lazily across at the sleepy, sweltering town, with the sky line of steeples, and the shore line adorned with boathouses and the Vassar Brewery. Apparently a game of pitch pennies, hearts, or mumblety-peg is as high as their ideals of activity aspire. The jangle of a piano out of tune struggles to carry a song that began far above Cayuga's waters and has been sung from Greenland's icy mountains to—Johannesburg. Alma Mater, mangled almost beyond recognition, is Alma Mater still. In Ithaca he of the lusty lung and tuneless ear would have been killed long ago, bless his heart. Here no one seems to mind.

"Where's the old man?"

"Down at the boathouse, tinkering."

"Where's John?"

"Guess he's down there, too."

"Any letters for me?"

"Don't know—stacks of them up there on the table."

"What DO you know?"

"That it's four hours and thirty-five minutes since grub."

"Going to row this afternoon?"

"Hope not. What are the odds over in town?"

¶ On the way to the boathouse the alumnus reflects: "Rather unenthusiastic; one might almost call it surly." But then, as in years before he realizes that perhaps enthusiasm may seem rather cheap to boys whose hands bear the thick calluses that tell of long hours of toil unobserved, and aching backs endured alone. No wonder that the crowd that comes thus at the eleventh hour to shout should meet with faint response of interest. They have done the work; they have work to do. What good in fuss or acclamation?

¶ He enters the boathouse quietly. He finds two earnest, busy men. A handshake, a word or two; he has entered into the spirit and sits humbly down to watch.

¶ The launch is at the pier. Mr. Courtney goes to the door; a keen look out over the water, a glance at his watch; ah, here they are on time. A different lot, decidedly. There are jokes, there are pranks, there is laughing chaff, all the more noticeable when at a quiet word each takes his place by the gleaming shell. "Lift!" And with infinite care and to the rhythm of a steady tread that shakes the house, the shell is borne out and lowered beside the float. It is all very business-like, and very sober business, too.

¶ Mr. Courtney is good to the alumnus. "Don't you want to come along?" he says. With a mumbled word of thanks that but faintly expresses his relief and gratitude, the alumnus clammers into the launch.

¶ "Ready all! Stroke!"

¶ That beautiful Cornell machine! A glance towards the masterly man at the wheel meets an answering smile of appreciation and pride in his boys. The alumnus settles himself in contentment to watch what he has watched so many times before, the last rehearsal of a Cornell triumph.

¶ One always feels sure of a Cornell crew. They can be counted on to do their best. The possibility of flukes, of unsuspected and unexpected weak backs, was eliminated long ago in the heart-breaking struggles on the Lake.

¶ The alumnus has a good appetite for dinner that night. He sleeps well. His enthusiasm is no less real because it has become intelligent. At the start the next afternoon he sits with a calmness that surprises himself and waits for the crews to come. He is almost amused at the fervor which greets the exhibition of perfect form as Cornell glides quietly into view. He has retained some of the calmness and determination which he breathed in the day before. He realizes that the race is in a way only an incident in the year's work. He remembers when it seemed to him that the speed of the shell depended somewhat on his being able to keep the whole car yelling. He lets a younger man lead the cheers now, but gladly joins in with all his might.

¶ After the race he feels an amused sympathy for the perspiring darky vender whose arms are full of all the flags except the red and white. He is rather surprised to see wild glee break out in the boathouse as the crew comes back to the float, but he knows now that it is more than anything else the sense of relief from the long-continued strain.

¶ He is glad that he came. He is always glad that he came. It is good to have one's confidence thus restored at least once a year. It is good to feel that honest, intelligent work counts.

HERE ARE ALWAYS SOME PLEASANT FEATURES ONE CAN RECOLLECT, EVEN AFTER HAVING PASSED THROUGH A DISCOURAGING AND DISAPPOINTING ORDEAL. The more disappointing and discouraging the results which the person has met, the more pronounced become the pleasant features which manifest themselves.

While acting in the capacity of coach of the football team at Cornell during the past two years, there has been much to depress and disappoint, especially during the last year; and the pleasant things that occurred I do not intend to leave unmentioned for they came at a time when they were most heartily appreciated. Those who are called back to coach, and who from constant association with the men, enter heart and soul into the work with no selfish or personal ambition to satisfy other than to have the team win for the purpose of establishing the supremacy of Alma Mater, can best appreciate the bitterness of defeat. There is a peculiar sting about a defeat that no one feels quite so keenly as the coaches.

One of the pleasantest features of my work at Cornell as coach during the season of nineteen hundred and two, is the recollection of the treatment received at the hands of the undergraduates after the team was defeated at Princeton. A person can appreciate how enthusiasm will run riot and provoke hundreds of students to assemble and draw a victorious team through the streets on a float as though they were proud of them, but after the game at Princeton hundreds of students stood waiting at day-light to meet the defeated team and draw them through the streets of Ithaca, singing Alma Mater. It was a manifestation of college spirit not easy to comprehend and such as few older Cornellians ever expected to see. It gave us new courage and the coaches were not the only ones to appreciate the demonstration, for every player in practice thereafter proved, by his determined work, that he appreciated such a generous and wholesome spirit on the part of the students and we all of us regretted that we could not come up to the expectations of the undergraduates who so loyally supported the team in defeat as well as victory. ¶ I fail to see where any comment on the work of the team during the past year would be of any benefit unless it were given so that the undergraduates would profit by the mistakes made on the part of those in charge, and exert their influence to have these defects remedied in the future. It is with this purpose in mind that I submit what I consider to be of some importance so far as the development of next year's team is concerned and not with any idea of excusing the coaches for the unsatisfactory results of last season. It should be the sole purpose, and I believe it is the aim of all Cornellians, to do all in their power to place Cornell football on the high plane of success which has been attained in some of the other branches of athletics at our institution. Such was the purpose of organizing the graduate system two years ago, and so far the undergraduates have no cause for alarm and should lose no confidence in the system. The great fault lies in the fact that the graduate system is not carried out as it should be; where one graduate did return to assist in the coaching, ten or twelve should have returned.

¶ Last year there were more candidates out for the team than ever before, and as early as September twenty-second one hundred and five men made their appearance on Percy Field. This was encouraging and caused the students to believe that this fact, together with the presence of many of the "Varsity" players of the year previous made success seem almost a foregone conclusion. On September twenty-second there were two of us endeavoring to coach these one hundred and five men in the rudiments of the game. It was a case where we appreciated the presence of the candidates but could not do them justice and were obliged to neglect them in a very large degree. It is at this time of the football season that the graduates should return in large numbers and single out what they consider a promising candidate and teach him all they know about the game. It is the only way that a successful team can be made, for any attempt to teach the fundamentals after the season is advanced to the point of team play is bound to take up valuable time and disorganize the team. It is for the undergraduates to find out why the older players do not return and assist in coaching the team. I believe that the old graduates are just as loyal to Cornell as are the graduate players of other institutions and that there is no reason why they should not return in greater numbers early in the season, as do the old players at some of the other Universities. The work of the players during last season was satisfactory and they did the best they could under the circumstances, but we will have to confess that they were neglected in a great many respects. ¶ It was our endeavor last fall not to neglect any man who came to try for the team, but in doing this we were unable to confine our attention to the "Varsity" team as we desired to do. Nearly all the early part of the season the "scrubs" had to take care of themselves except when given fundamental work after being divided into squads and placed in charge of some of the older players. A great many days, even after the season was far advanced, the "scrubs" had to be looked after either by Morrison or myself and given a few plays hurriedly which they were unable to execute properly and then to line up against the "Varsity," their plays being so poorly executed by reason of lack of practice, that it was not a benefit to them and at times a detriment to the "Varsity."

¶ The system of coaching was carried out so far as it could be, under the circumstances, along the same line as during the year nineteen hundred and one. The idea of the system is for the old "grads" to return and teach the new men all the fundamentals of the game which they have learned through their experience. It is a handing down from year to year of valuable knowledge of football gained by actual participation in the game. There were those who returned last season to coach, as they have done since they were graduated, whose work was most valuable and greatly appreciated by all those who are interested in the team. These men have returned to coach from year to year and they will undoubtedly be as loyal in their support in the future as they have been in the past, but, notwithstanding the fact that there are a few of the "old reliables" who have kept in close touch with the football interests at Cornell for several years, it is not to them alone that we should look to make the graduate system a permanent institution. The co-operation of every man who has taken part in football should be solicited; no one should be slighted and every one should be thoroughly convinced of the fact that his presence on the field is expected every fall, and he must be made to feel that he is a necessary part of the graduate system. There are many very valuable men who possess a thorough knowledge of the fundamentals of the game and who could take new men and develop them during the first two or three weeks of the season as well if not better than the regular coaches, but these same men have been so long away from Cornell that they feel they are relics of the past and that their presence would not be appreciated, inasmuch as no effort is made to get them to return. In the future these men should be included among the list of those invited and every effort should be made on the part of the undergraduates to see that each year several old men who have been almost forgotten be brought to light and invited back and made a part of the graduate system. It is only by doing this that the graduate system can be made a success.

¶ It was an encouraging fact last fall that one or two of the old graduates made their appearance on Percy Field, and although they had not been there for quite a number of years they became enthusiastic and declared their intention of returning again. On the other hand, it was discouraging to know that quite a number of men whom we expected to return failed to make their appearance. In the future, it is to be hoped that the treatment of these men will be such that they will look forward to the coaching season with pleasure and support the team with the same loyalty that they did a few years since while playing on the "Varsity."

¶ For the past two years it has been my pleasure to have charge of the line men, and in conclusion I would express my sentiments in the words of the poet:

THE MAN ON THE LINE

Men cheer for the half-back who's made a long run,
Or the full-back who's smashed through the line;
They yell till they're hoarse
When an end makes a dash,
Declaring it "simply fine,"
But they seem to forget, 'mid their yells and huzzahs,
The man who stands firm on the line,
To open a hole for the end to go through,
With an aptness we can not define;
And then when the "guards back" comes crushing along,
And he drops 'neath "the push" in the mud;
The side lines don't yell at the play he has made,
In nearly the way that they should.
Though others forget him and thoughtless pass by,
With favor this wish shall be mine:
May good luck attend him and prosper his plays,
The man who plays ball on the line.

ERHAPS ONE OF THE MOST POTENT FACTORS IN THE LIFE OF ANY UNIVERSITY IS ITS ATHLETICS. Its very nature and discipline are such that they crystallize in the student body a strong University spirit, which more than any other one thing goes to increase its progress and widen its influence.

Like other Universities of its kind, Cornell has had to start at the beginning and carve her way in athletics in the face of strong opposition and keen competition. She started in at a time when the other large Universities were flourishing, and when athletics in them had taken a strong foothold, but, today, by hard work and earnest endeavor on the part of those who have been and are now with her, she has been placed in an enviable position among the leading Universities of the country. In many departments we have surpassed the most cherished hopes of our warmest admirers. In CREW, Football and Track the victories achieved have placed Cornell in a respectable position among the leading Universities. Our position is now firmly fixed; our reputation an enviable one, and the continued improvement in every branch is in the hands of every student who has any love for Cornell. Her future is in our hands, and if we hope to increase her standing we must work with renewed energy with this end in view.

The results attained and the victories achieved by the baseball team, while not as frequent as we could hope, still when we consider the many difficulties the members have been compelled to labor under, such as stress of work and distance of field, have been on the whole most encouraging. For various reasons the progress of the National game has been slow; but by the hardest kind of work and many sacrifices on the part of the candidates, we have reached a great measure of success.

In the early part of the year the underclass games were played as usual, and the work done by many of the players raised our hopes, for they showed considerable ability. The new men showed up in good form, and this lead us to believe that we had a right to expect many valuable acquisitions to the Varsity. Of course we suffered as a result of the mid-year examinations and the unfortunate fever epidemic, which visited the city. These two causes shared honors in thinning our forces, and for a time interfered greatly with the progress of our work. Many of our best men left the city for their homes, owing to the demoralized conditions, but when we began outdoor practice the situation had assumed a brighter outlook, for a number of the men had returned to the University. All the members of the 1902 team had reported for practice, with the exception of Brown, Whinery and Bristol; the two former having graduated, while the latter, who is a student in Forestry, had to go to Axton with the other members of his class.

¶ On the whole the class and quality of men who reported for practice were satisfactory, but there is no denying the fact that we do not get the same high grade of material from which to pick, as falls to the lot of the other institutions. As a rule many of the men who report for practice are crude and inexperienced in the most essential parts of the game, and the work of "whipping" them into Varsity material is consequently slow.

¶ The fact must not be lost sight of that the recent epidemic will have a noticeable effect upon the registration list next fall, and it is incumbent upon us to begin work at once to have a large entering class, and with this end in view make special efforts to influence many athletes to be among the number.

¶ This is a duty the student body and Alumni owe to the University, and by increasing the number of students we will increase the strength of the various athletic teams. We must not sit idly, awaiting developments, or until some other University steps in and snatches the promising men away from us. If we hope to make even a respectable showing in 1904, the time to begin to build up our teams is the present.

¶ We must therefore enter into this work with the same spirit that has characterized all our past undertakings, and by the hearty co-operation of the Students, Alumni and Faculty, our efforts will be crowned with success.

EARLY SPRING PRACTICE

CAPTAIN WARREN

The Varsity Track Team

HE TRACK TEAM OF 1902 WAS AN IMPROVEMENT OVER CORNELL'S PREVIOUS TEAMS. It had very few inter-collegiate stars, but was a finely balanced team. In nearly every event the difference between the three best men was very slight, and should one fail to come up to his standard, there was ever a man ready to step in and pull off a victory.

¶ The evenness in ability of the men of this year's team is due in a measure to the fact that all track candidates are expected to continue work with little or no let up all the college year. The lack of developed preparatory school material makes this necessary for Cornell to meet her rivals successfully on the track. To keep up the winning pace set in track athletics the past three years, it will be necessary for all interested in track athletics here, to keep in touch with promising men at their own preparatory schools and let them know what we do to encourage this branch at Cornell. No college gives better chances for that competition which is so necessary to athletic development. For instance this year we held the annual underclass meet; our cross country team raced in both Philadelphia and in New York; our relay team went to Boston, Washington and New York; and we entered a triangular meet with Syracuse University and the 74th Regiment at Buffalo. In addition to these there is the Western trip, a dual meet with Michigan, and our own weekly meets during the winter. The spring schedule calls for entries for the Pennsylvania Relay Carnival and for three dual meets,—with Syracuse, Princeton and Pennsylvania. The Intercollegiate meet in New York concludes the season.

¶ Last year Cornell took her first Western trip and met Michigan at Ann Arbor, March 27th, Michigan winning by a score of 42 1-2 to 29 1-2. Michigan had some star all-round performers who were able to compete in several events, while the Cornell men had to confine themselves mostly to one event. Michigan's few stars were the mainstay of the team and were responsible for the victory. Each team was allowed to enter fifteen men. The competition was closer than the score shows, for the winning of another first and second place would have given victory to Cornell, 37 1-2 to 34 1-2. The Cornell team is always at a decided disadvantage when meeting another college away from home indoors, especially so in the Ann Arbor Gymnasium, where the conditions for competition are so different from our own. It is the plan in the development of our teams to look on the winter training as merely preparatory work for the spring dual meets and the Intercollegiates. Hard training is not exacted of the men until after Easter. Then again, we do not send the whole team on these indoor trips, fifteen being the highest number ever taken. But Michigan is the acknowledged champion of the West in track athletics, and the experience gained in this winter competition is of great value in determining the worth of our team. The management, however, will endeavor next year and thereafter to meet Michigan on neutral grounds, where the chances will be more equal. I believe Cornell's team would have been victorious against Michigan outdoors.

¶ At Albany on May 17th Cornell again defeated Princeton by the score of 76 points to 40. This meet was limited to twenty-three men on a side. Cornell forfeited the points in the pole vault, Frederick having injured his ankle a few days before the meet. A look at the summary clearly shows Cornell's superiority. On May 24th at Philadelphia, Cornell was victorious over Pennsylvania, scoring 67 points to her opponent's 50. The team was without the services of Sears, who, had he run, would have made the score as decisive as the Princeton one.

¶ Cornell had no chance to show her true strength at the Intercollegiate meet and could gain only sixth place, with a total of three points, Foster getting third in the two-mile run and Trott fourth in the one-mile run. Such was the result in spite of the fact that, with the exception of Harvard and Yale, Cornell could have easily beaten any other college entered there in a dual competition. Princeton, whom we had so decisively beaten, finished in third place there on the work of four men. Cornell's team competed up to their standard, but there were enough individual stars from the many colleges in nearly every event to shut out the Cornell men from any one of the coveted four places for which points were given. The team of 1901 scored fifteen points at the Intercollegiate meet, while the 1902 team, which was a stronger one, scored only three.

A College Annual

IS A BREEZY THING. It has an identity and an individuality, both of which are unique. Handling a college annual in the midst of other business is like coming to the oasis in the desert. Has it a value as an advertising medium? A manufacturer standing at the writer's desk this week (March 5th) said "We advertise in a number of college annuals and consider them first-class channels"

All Good Things must win upon their merits. The INTERNATIONAL has won a greater distinction and is in more general use than any other work of its kind.

A. H. SAYCE, LL.D., D.D., of Oxford University, England, has recently said of it: It is difficult to conceive of a dictionary more exhaustive and complete. Everything is in it—not only what we might expect to find in such a work, but also what few of us would ever have thought of looking for. A supplement to the new edition has brought it fully up to date.—A large number of similar testimonials have been received.

The Beer of Civilization

CHLITZ BEER is the beer of civilization. Go to any part of the earth where mankind values purity, and you will find Schlitz beer is the recognized pure beer.

For fifty years the Schlitz Agencies have followed white men's conquests.

They are twenty years old in South Africa.

Schlitz beer was famous in Siberia before a railroad was thought of.

When Japan and China first began to awake, it was advertised in their newspapers.

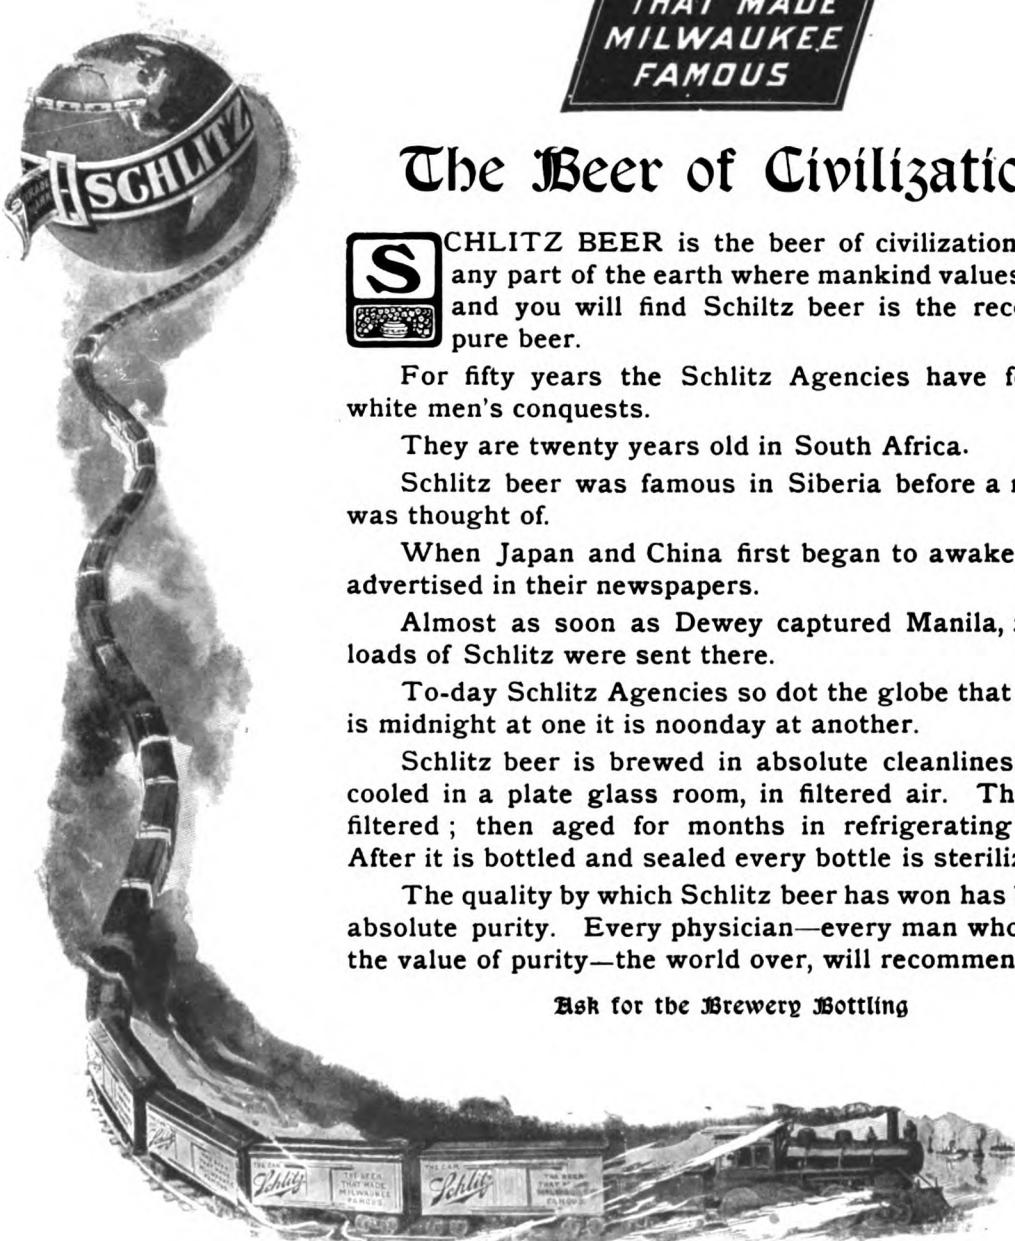

Almost as soon as Dewey captured Manila, 216 car-loads of Schlitz were sent there.

To-day Schlitz Agencies so dot the globe that when it is midnight at one it is noonday at another.

Schlitz beer is brewed in absolute cleanliness. It is cooled in a plate glass room, in filtered air. Then it is filtered; then aged for months in refrigerating rooms. After it is bottled and sealed every bottle is sterilized.

The quality by which Schlitz beer has won has been its absolute purity. Every physician—every man who knows the value of purity—the world over, will recommend it.

DYNAMO-ELECTRIC MACHINERY

A Manual for Students of Electro-technics

By SYLVANUS P. THOMPSON, D.Sc., B.A., F.R.S., Principal of, and Professor of Physics in the City and Guilds of London Technical College, Finsbury; Late Professor of Experimental Physics in University College, Bristol; Member of the Institution of Electrical Engineers; Vice-President of the Physical Society of London; Membre de la Société de Physique de Paris; Honorary Member of the Physical Society of Frankfort-on-the-Main; Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society.

Eighth American edition enlarged and revised. One volume, large 8vo, dark green cloth. With 29 folding plates and over 500 valuable illustrations. 800 pages. Price, $5.00

SILVANUS P. THOMPSON, D.Sc., B.A., F.R.S., is regarded by all critics as the greatest writer on electro-technics known to electrical engineers. His remarkable genius in this direction manifested itself many years ago, when the science of electricity was just budding and little known that was not arbitrary, empirical, and in many respects useless as a means of further progress. There were many threads to be gathered up, composing the tangled skein of practice, and it required a discerning eye, an analytical mind, and a broadness of comprehension rarely met with, to weave together these broken threads of fragmentary experience and disconnected thought. It required the labor of a master of the science to present it, free from irrational conclusions, intelligible alike to the practical worker and theoretician. Professor Silvanus P. Thompson has made the subject of electro-technics his life study. He has presented it in so broad and connected a manner, with such masterly ability and perfection of description, that his work on Dynamo-Electric Machinery is acknowledged to be the greatest of all works bearing upon the principles, design, construction and operation of Dynamo-Electric Machinery.

The work Professor Thompson has produced on Dynamo-Electric Machinery is called by him a manual for students of electro-technics. There are reasons for calling it the most complete, most concise and best-known book in the profession. It has formed an indispensable part of all university courses in electrical engineering; no student has ever graduated with the degree of electrical engineer that was not required to study it, and in a great majority of cases to pass an examination upon it. If we judge a man by his achievement, we merely reflect our opinions of him by eulogizing his work. In this case, we can only conclude by saying that this volume of "Dynamo-Electric Machinery" represents a perfect encyclopaedia of the most valuable electrical information, and its author has reared to himself in its execution a mighty monument to his own remarkable genius.

Important Invention

BELLOW will be found a description of the "Cullen Ball-Bearing Rifle Gun." A company has been recently formed for the purpose of manufacturing this weapon, with a capital of $500,000, incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia.

Major Anderson, one of the incorporators, was Assistant Chief of Ordnance for the army of Northern Virginia, commanded by General Robert E. Lee.

Col. West Steever was Chief of Artillery with Gen. John H. Forney, at Vicksburg during the late war, and was appointed by Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle by Act of Congress to examine and report upon high explosives several years ago. The gun is thoroughly protected by patents, both in the United States and foreign countries. The advantages of this weapon are summed up as follows:

The ball-bearing grooves give a rotary motion to a smooth walled projectile, something that has been long sought for, but never attained by ordnance experts.

Smooth Projectile.—The smooth walled projectile is much cheaper to build, as it obviates the necessity for the expensive copper band, and in addition the energy that is consumed by forcing a banded projectile through the grooves of an ordinary stiff rifled gun is added to the force behind the projectile in a ball-bearing gun, thus greatly increasing the velocity, penetration and range.

Life of Gun.—The strains on the walls of a gun are reduced 75 per cent., except over the breech where initial explosion of propellant occurs, thus obviating the necessity for two, at least, of the jackets that are shrunk over the tube of an ordinary stiff rifled gun.

This is to be accounted for in two ways, the elasticity of the balls, and the smooth walled projectile; second, from the fact that the projectile gets away from the gun (calculas will prove this in addition to actual trials that have been made) in one-fortieth of the time it takes to get away from an ordinary gun, same charges of propellant and same weight projectile being used. The life of the gun is prolonged indefinitely.

When one set of balls is worn out, another can be substituted, and so on during elastic life or metal fatigue limit of the walls of the grooves.

Calculas shows that it is possible to renew sets of balls four times. The average life of one set of balls is 3000 rounds, minimum. Thus a life of 12,000 rounds is insured in guns of from two to six inches, inclusive, and the life decreases in proportion one-sixth per inch in calibres of from six to sixteen inches.

When the life of a 16-inch gun of present stiff rifled type (200 pounds maximum) is taken into consideration, the superiority of the ball-bearing gun is obvious.

The trial 2-pounder which has been subjected to the most severe tests, shows results as follows:

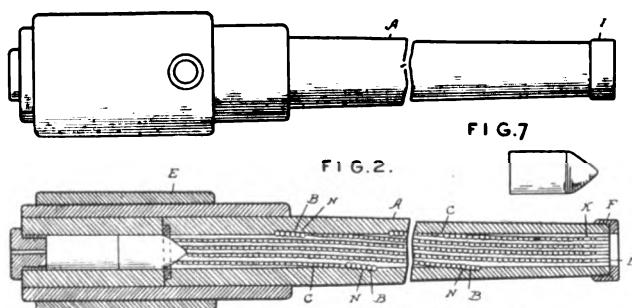

Durability.—The piece had been fired 2311 rounds, in some cases with excessive charges (and with sand in the ball-bearing grooves for 10 rounds) and the report shows that that gun is only 3 per cent. less effective than when first fired.

Velocity.—The average velocity was 3200 feet per second at the muzzle, against 1800 feet per second for the Driggs and Hotchkiss, and 2000 feet per second for the Maxim.

The three guns mentioned were tried in a competitive test with the ball-bearing gun by General Flagler and other ordnance experts, with following results:

All four guns were fired at a plate of nickel steel 20 feet square and 1 3/8 inches thick. The plate was 3000 yards from the guns.

Range.—The ball-bearing gun was fired and the projectile struck and penetrated plate 3 feet from center of target, ricochetted, and was picked up 1626 yards beyond, embedded in the dirt 17 inches, making a total range of 4626 yards after getting through 1 3/8 inches of best armour plate. The three other guns before mentioned were fired, hit the plate in two instances: the Driggs and Hotchkiss, with their projectiles, failed to penetrate the plate, and glanced into the earth in front of it. The Maxim projectile hit the plate and stuck in it, with the nose of the projectile extending $\frac{5}{8}$ of an inch through it.

All four guns were fired with the same charges of brown, semi-smokeless powder and the same weight projectile, the only difference being that the ball-bearing gun's projectile was perfectly smooth walled, and the others fired banded projectiles.

It will be seen from the foregoing summary of facts that the ball-bearing gun can be built cheaper and lighter and give greater range, velocity, penetration and durability than either of the guns with which it was tried in competition, which were the best types of the modern built up stiff rifled guns.

Length of Gun.—The initial power of the charge not being wasted to force the soft metal band through friction grooves, the length of the barrel may be shortened from 75 to 85 calibres to 45 to 55 calibres and even less. The result will avoid the criticism now obtaining in regard to the extreme length of gun now turned out by the works of the Armstrong, Krupp & Canet, especially the latter.

Weight of Gun.—Reducing the weight at least one-third only needs to be mentioned to be appreciated, with reference not only to the use, but also to the cost thereof.

Heating Up.—As the balls in the gun very materially diminish friction, the great development of heat is avoided; a most important consideration, especially with relation to rapid-fire guns and small arms.

Fuse.—The absence of the ring of soft metal around the projectile will permit the employment of nose fuses which are much more reliable than base fuses; even the best of the latter give more misfires than explosions.

Carriage.—The gun will, on account of the small recoil, effect material changes in the construction of gun carriages, both barbette and casemate, and there will be a tendency to return to the old style, which were of small cost compared to those constructed now, to withstand the great weight and powerful recoil of the stiff rifled gun.

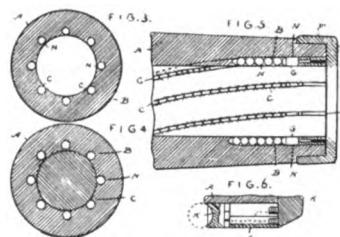

Accuracy.—The band on the projectile being dispensed with, the projectile passes smoothly through the air and is not held back or deflected by jagged excrescences formed on the band by the forcible passage through the gun in engagement with the rifle grooves, as is the case with banded projectiles.

The inventor of this gun, Capt. Orlan Clyde Cullen, commanded a battery in the Cuban Army during the insurrection against Spanish oppression that preceded the war between Spain and the United States, and he was severely wounded, receiving two saber cuts in an engagement between a "filibustering expedition" and a Spanish regiment of the Infanta Isabella that occurred January 20, 1895, about 29 miles west of Havana. He also assisted to land several other filibustering expeditions after recovering from his wounds in the hospital at Tampa, besides serving several months as an artillery officer with General Maceo, La Crete and other Cuban leaders."

He also contributed over $19,000 to the cause of Cuban independence, and his father, the late Charles W. Cullen, was one of the crew of the Virginian. The idea of building a gun that would not kick or heat up, and one that would not consume so large a part of the energy developed by the explosion of the propellant occurred to him after having two Hotchkiss guns jam from overheating in action, and he worked out drawings and calculations for same while in the hospital, although he had previously experimented with guns and projectiles of almost every known type, and had invented an automatic pistol, auto-propulsive shell, and other improvements in ordnance, previous to inventing the ball-bearing gun.

His success in this connection is, in a measure, due to the fact that the ingenuity of the age in ordnance matters has been directed toward developing breech mechanisms to the neglect of the barrel, which has not been radically changed within the past fifteen years.

The recent tests at Sligo, Maryland, by a party of ordnance experts, including Colonel Steever, Major Anderson and George Anderson and Captain Cullen, the inventor, demonstrate the entire practicability of applying the ball-bearing system to small arms. The gun test showed twice the penetration of the government rifle of same calibre. There was practically no recoil, heating up of barrel or fouling. This test was conducted on the farm of Mr. Maus, a brother of Colonel Maus, of General Miles' staff.

Cascadilla is the oldest boys' school, preparatory to Cornell; it has been represented at that institution by nearly 1000 students.

CASCADILLA SCHOOL

Ithaca, New York

The special prominence of Cascadilla is that of a fitting school for Cornell. Its small, carefully graded classes insure the largest opportunity to the individual pupil. Its well balanced courses, thorough instruction and concentration of work, have made its certificates widely known as a guarantee of superior preparation. The catalogue gives full description of the courses, the ideal school homes, the model recitation and recreation buildings, and the provision for physical culture. A personal visit is especially desired. Registration 1902-03 from thirty states. Commanding, beautiful and healthful location. PRESIDENT SCHURMAN

We built our first Hydraulic Jack—'twas a good jack, probably the best ever made up to that time.

To-day we build nearly 300 different kinds of HYDRAULIC JACKS suitable for any service where a jack can be applied.

Long ago we found a way to build better jacks, and the ones we now make have rams and cylinders cut from solid high grade steel.

Our Jack Catalog is yours upon request—we have other books about our Hydraulic Presses—Binders—Punches—that we would be pleased to send you.

HYGEIA ICE

Furnished Exclusively by THE ITHACA ICE COMPANY

Manufactured by the Hygeia Refrigerating and Hygeia Ice Company of Elmira, by the following process :

The water is pumped from deep wells and is evaporated into steam in boilers of the capacity of one hundred and twenty horse power each. The steam passes through a separator to remove any oil and then through a filter filled with crushed coke. The steam is then condensed into water by cold water running over the condensing pipes. The water then goes to a skimmer where any impurities rise to the surface and are automatically skimmed off, and to a reboiler where it is boiled the second time by live steam. The steam and water are then put through the second set of condensers and after condensation, through a charcoal filter. The filtered water is then cooled and conducted to the freezing cans which are covered and put into a tank of cold brine which freezes the water into ice of unequalled clearness and purity.
